ADVERTISEMENT.

THE LOCAL REGISTER for the town of Sheffield, is, as the Compiler believes, the first book of the kind which has hitherto issued from the press. On this account, he begs the indulgent consideration of his Subscribers, in the detection of many errors which probably may be found in the following pages. Any authorised corrections of names, dates, &c., or additional matter of interest, which may be forwarded to the Publisher before the close of each succeeding year, will appear in the successive annual supplements. The Compiler takes this opportunity of tendering his thanks to the Original Subscribers to the "REGISTER," who, on the faith of the first prospectus issued, ordered copies of the work, and without whose liberal support he could not have ventured on the labour and expense of publication.

SURVEY OF THE PARISH.

TOWNSHIP OF SHEFFIELD.

The Park, the Park-hill, the greatest part of the town of Sheffield, and a small portion of the parish lying north-west of the town, comprehending the villages of Portobello and Leavy Greave, and reaching to the brow of the hill that overhangs the reservoirs on Crookes-moor, form the township of Sheffield. From that brow, the boundary is an irregular line, which passes beyond the Infirmary to the Don, opposite Neepsend. To this may be added a small tract lying along the Don near the Castle-hill, which was formerly orchards and other appendages of the castle. The whole of this township lies on the right bank of the Don, and its area is 3436½ acres.

TOWNSHIP OF ECCLESALL BYERLOW.

The ground between the Porter and Sheaf, until these streams enter the Park, a part lying north of the Porter comprising Broom-hall, and a considerable portion of Crookes-moor, form the township and Manor of Ecclesall. To this must be added, Lidgate and a small territory round, which, on the division after the inclosure act of 1779 were assigned to Ecclesall and Nether Hallam. The area of the township is 4180 acres.

TOWNSHIP OF UPPER HALLAM.

This township lies between the Riveling on the north and the Porter on the south. Its eastern boundary line is at the distance of about two miles from Sheffield. On the west it adjoins Derbyshire. This township has the largest superficies of the six which compose the parish of Sheffield. Its area is 8836 acres.

TOWNSHIP OF NETHER HALLAM.

This township lies to the north-west of Sheffield, and adjoins Ecclesall and Upper Hallam. The Don separates it from Brightside Byerlow, and the Riveling and Loxley from Ecclesfield. (A small portion of the ground on the left bank of the Loxley is laid down as appertaining to the township in the map of the parish of Sheffield.) This township contains 1900 acres.

TOWNSHIP OF BRIGHTSIDE BYERLOW.

That part of the parish of Sheffield which lies on the left bank of the Don is the township of Brightside Byerlow. In the map of the parish, about ten fields on the bank of the river near Carbrook are coloured as belonging to this township. The little stream, called Blackburn Brook, divides it from the parish of Rotherham.

TOWNSHIP OF ATTERCLIFFE-CUM-DARNALL.

A tract of country which is nearly in the form of an equilateral triangle of the area of two square miles, is the township of Attercliffe-cum-Darnall. One side is on the line of the Park-wall, another the course of the Don, and the third is marked by the course of a little rill called the Carbrook, which rises near Bowden Homesteads, and falls into the Don near the village which bears its name. It lies east of the town of Sheffield.

200—525.

A. D. The artisans of Sheffield manufacture arrows for the Brigantes and Coritani (tribes of native Britons) who oppose the Roman invaders.—Trad.

“————— From their leafy homes
The vassals of the Lord full oft go forth
And track the yellow streamlets, till they reach
The secret place, where easy labour gains
The precious stone, which broken and subdued
By fire, gives to the warrior's joy, the targe,
The spear point, and the helm of proof.”—MS.

200. Municipal colony of Roman legionaries settled within the manor of Hallam.—H. H.

220. The Roman legionaries introduce amongst the Britons in the neighbourhood of Sheffield the arts of social life.

— Iron mines and minerals first excite attention.—H. H.

450. The people of Hallam cease to be subject to the Romans.

— Ravaged by the Picts and Scots.

525. A great tribe of adventurers, in fourteen different bodies, with their Thanes and chieftains at their head, landed on the East coast, and after fighting many battles, finally succeeded in making a settlement in Hallam.

550—1075.

550. Hallamshire and the neighbouring country possessed by the Saxons, and forming a portion of one kingdom (Etheldred's, Mercia or SouthHumber) of the Heptarchy.
600. The Saxon government of the people of Hallam.—
 "There are now only three names remaining of the fourteen mentioned in history, viz. Hull, Hallam, and Halifax, which at one time were like petty independent states; their lords had their castles, with knights and esquires, and all the people as vassals, who were called out to war at their Lord's pleasure; they had likewise laws peculiar to themselves, which, it appears, were arbitrary, barbarous, and cruel, as may be supposed from those reproachful terms preserved in history, 'from Hull, Hell, (Hall, or Hallam,) and Halifax, good Lord deliver us.'"
628. Christianity first introduced into Hallam.—Bede.
830. Hallamshire possessed or ravaged by the Danes.
1050. Earl Waltheof and his Hallamshire men, having defended the castle of York against William the Conqueror, and having no prospect of relief, capitulate upon honourable terms, after a close siege of six months.
- The lands of the parish of Sheffield acknowledge three Saxon lords, Ulfac, Sweyn, and Earl Waltheof.—"Eastward a little, traced by the golden rills, richer than streams of Pactolus, sheltered by gentle hills, at whose fair feet the modest valleys lie, a warrior and a warrior's followers dwell."—MS.
- Sheffield (originally one of the berewitæ of the manor of Hallam) obtained a degree of independence, and was the little capital of a very small manor to which it gave name.
1075. Waltheof, the last Saxon Lord of the Manor of Hallam, (Sheffield,) having conspired with Ralph de Waer against the life of William the Conqueror, and for the freedom of the country, was beheaded at Winchester.
1075. King William, to put it out of the power of the Hallamshire men either to rise themselves or prepare arms for others, determined to lay that part of the country waste, as he had done the North of Yorkshire; hiding his purpose under the pretence that this severity was a punishment for, and in consequence of the conspiracy entered into by Waltheof. He therefore sent a strong force of Normans to destroy Hallamshire with fire and sword, giving orders that all who made resistance should be put to death, without sparing age or sex. The city of Hallam, with Earl Waltheof's hall, were razed to the ground, and the wretched inhabitants compelled to carry the ruins away, that it might never be said, "here stood once the city of Hallam." Nor was Sheffield spared,—the church and priory were destroyed, and the endowment given to a monastery in Normandy; every house in the town was destroyed except a few poor cottages for the poor vassals. An edict was issued that Hallam should not be rebuilt, nor iron works be wrought, nor the inhabitants be suffered to settle as owners of possessions, on pain of the King's displeasure.—Corres. Merc.

1075—1160.

1075. The chapel of the blessed Lady of the Bridge, and free habitations for poor widows erected.—Trad.
1080. The manor of Sheffield possessed by the Countess Judith, widow of Waltheof.
1100. Sheffield and the lands of Hallam possessed by William de Lovetot. (Henry I.)
- . Sheffield possessed every thing essential to the comfortable residence of a considerable population; a church, a corn mill, an hospital, a bridge, and a castle for its protection.—H.H.
1110. Sheffield Church.—Foundation of St. Peter's, or Parish Church of Sheffield, by William de Lovetot, and endowment of the same with one-third of the tythe of the whole parish.—Trad.
1155. Earliest known residence of the Lords of Hallamshire at their castle at Sheffield.
- . St. Leonard's hospital erected by the house of De Lovetot, on a little eminence on the East side of the town, (Spital Hill.)
- . Inhabitants of the town of Sheffield probably for the most part small artificers, or persons who had certain services to perform at the castle.
1160. Iron works established. "To the other inhabitants of the parish of Sheffield we may add a rude and untractable people, whose occupations were in working the iron mines, or preparing for useful purposes the metal that was extracted."

1170—1264.

1170. The parish of Sheffield contained thirty-seven carucates and a half of taxable land, with nearly an equal number of ploughs.—Domesday Book.
- . The manor of Sheffield Terra Rogerii de Busli.—Dom. B.
1177. The heirs male of the family of the Lovetots, Lords of Sheffield, became extinct.
- . Maude de Lovetot, heiress of Hallamshire, given in marriage by Henry II. to Gerald de Furnivall, a Norman Knight.
1183. The abbey of Beauchief founded by Robert Fitz Ranulph de Alfreton, of Norton. "They (the people of Hallam) might now also look to enjoy those advantages of religious instruction and consolation, and of the orderly performance of the rites of their religion, which the proximity of a monastic establishment afforded; not to mention that there were crumbs falling from the well-spread board, that were thankfully accepted by the neighbouring poor. This house, therefore, soon became popular with its neighbours at Sheffield."—H. H.
1215. King John, then in arms against his barons, visited Sheffield, and sojourned with Gerald Baron Furnivall, who attached himself to his party.—Trad.
- . King John, on his way to York, was entertained at a house in Pryor-row, High-street, (some time occupied by the late Mr. Trippett, 1815,) and was so well pleased with his reception, from the townspeople, that he granted them many privileges.—Sheffield being in a state of vassalage under the Lord of Hallam, and the lord under the crown, the King granted the appointment of Town Regents, with a Town Clerk, (who was to be a man of learning and well versed in law,) and a town seal.—Anon.
1219. Gerald, first of the Barons Furnival, and Lords of Sheffield, died at Jerusalem.
1237. Thomas de Furnival, son and heir of Gerald, slain in Palestine.
1240. Gerald de Furnival, third Lord of Hallam, died without issue.
1264. The town of Sheffield totally destroyed by fire, by John D'Eyvell, in arms with the barons against Henry III.

1270--1332.

1270. The second castle at Sheffield founded by Thomas de Furnival, Lord of Hallam.

“ I Lord Furnivall
I built this Castle Hall
And under this wall
Within this tomb was my buriall.”

1279. Thomas de Furnival, fourth Lord of Hallam, and successor to his brother, died.

1294. Thomas (fifth) Lord Furnival, Lord of Hallam, summoned to Parliament.

1296. King Edward I. granted to Thomas Lord Furnival, a charter to hold a market in Sheffield, on the Tuesday in every week, and a fair every year for three days.

1297. Furnival's Grant, or Magna Charta of Sheffield, providing “that it should be a free borough; that the base and uncertain services by which the inhabitants held their lands should be abolished; that Courts Baron should be held for the due administration of municipal justice; and, lastly, that all venders and buyers should be free of toll throughout Hallamshire,” executed before the chief persons of the neighbourhood, and Robert de Breton, seneschall.

——. Sheffield became the staple for the iron manufactures, especially for faulchion heads, arrow piles, and an ordinary sort of knives called whittles.—Harrison.

——. Extent of the town. “Some idea of the extent of the town may be formed from the position of the parish church. The site chosen for such an edifice would be close to the town, but not actually within it. A few straggling huts and smithies forming an irregular street, extending from the castle and bridge to the church gate, with a few houses lying towards the town mill; and perhaps a branch extending in a South-west direction, forming what is now (1820) called the Fargate, in respect of its distance from the castle, seemed to have formed the whole town of Sheffield. The parsonage house would then be a country residence, commanding a beautiful view of the woody hills to the North of the town, and separate from the other buildings by the extent of a spacious church yard.”—H. H.

1332. Thomas (fifth) Lord of Hallam died.

1339. Thomas (sixth) Lord Furnival, and Lord of Hallam, died.
1346. Sheffield obtained an extensive reputation for her manufactures.—H. H.
 "A Sheffield thwytell bare he in his hose,
 Ronde was his face and camysed was his nose.—Chaucer.
1366. Thomas (seventh) Lord Furnival, and Lord of Hallam, surnamed the Hasty, died.
1383. William Lord Furnival, of his house the last Lord of Hallamshire, died without male issue.
- The family of the Furnivals cease to be Lords of Sheffield, after having possessed (in virtue of a grant of King John, made in the fifth year of his reign) for the space of one hundred and eighty years.
1390. Foundation of a Grammar school.—Trad.
 " 'Twas in that mart of ancient honest fame,
 How ancient, Fox, let Chaucer's verse proclaim ;
 'Twas here to form aright our tender youth,
 Instruction mild pour'd forth the light of truth ;
 And wayward nature first was taught to bear
 The yoke of thralldom in a master's care."—Rev. Dr. Inchbald.
1406. Sir Thomas Nevil, Lord Furnival, and Lord of Sheffield in right of his wife, died.
1408. Maud de Nevil, first daughter of Thomas Nevil Lord Furnival, married to John Talbot, first Earl of Shrewsbury, succeeding in right of his wife to the Lordship of Sheffield.
1410. John Talbot, first Earl of Shrewsbury, summoned to Parliament by the style of John Talbot, of Hallamshire.
1428. John Kay hung in Sheffield for horse stealing, 6 Henry VI.—Sheff. Court Regis.
1434. Barker Pool.—The water reservoir called Barker Pool first made by Barker, of Balm Green, to supply water to the town.—Trad.
1453. John Talbot, first Earl of Shrewsbury, and Lord of Hallam, together with his son, slain at Chatillon ;
 "which Sir John Talbot, first Sir John Furnivall, was the most worthy warrior we read of all."
 "The live to report of this foresaid Lorde,
 How manly he was and full of chivalroze,
 What deeds that he did, I cannot by worde,
 Make rehearsal by metre ne prose ;
 In Ireland, France, Normandy, Gyon, and Gascone,
 His fere no renyng I rede of none."

1460—1501.

“So greatly did the Hallamshire men suffer while fighting round the Earl, as he lay bleeding on the field of battle, that there was not a house nor a family in all Hallamshire that did not lose either a father or a brother, a husband or a son, on that fatal day.”—Hist.

1460. John, second Earl of Shrewsbury, and Lord of Hallam, slain at the battle of Northampton.
1473. John, third Earl of Shrewsbury, and Lord of Hallam, died, and was interred in the chapel of the church.
1485. Historians, in their accounts of Bosworth Field Aug. 22. battle, remark that the largest arrows were made use of by the Earl of Richmond's forces, that were ever known before. The pile heads were bigger, well pointed with steel hardened; the backs were sharper, being ground in flutes, and much better polished than heretofore. It is further remarked, that this was the last improvement which was made in pile and arrow heads, one of the staple manufactures of Sheffield, as in the year 1521 muskets were introduced into the Royal army.
1485. Our Lady's Bridge. “Sir John Plesauce, vicar of Sheffield, and William Hill, of the same, maister mason, bargain for the making of a brygge of stone over the watyr of Dune, nighe the castell of Sheffield, well and sufficiently, the whych shall be made V arches embowed, IIII jowels and II heedys, with sure butments at eyther ende, and shall have for the making of it a C. marks.”—Orig. Ind. To cross the bridge it was necessary to ascend a flight of steps, the space of ground known as the Isle being the level of the bottom of Waingate.—1810.
1495. John Dore hung in Sheffield for murder, 10 Henry VII.—Sheff. Court Reg.
1498. John Hynde, of Sheffield, bequeathed to the vicar and ministers, in trust, “three tenements and a smithy house, in Water-lane, the rents thereof to pay the priest of St. Catherine saying mass.”—It is evident that there were at least two chantries, that of the blessed Virgin and that of St. Catherine, in the church of Sheffield.”—Hunter.
1501. Felice, wife of William Hynde, gave also in trust, a tenement, in Change-alley, London, to make sale thereof, and buy with the money arising thereby a cross of silver and gilt, with the image of the crucifix of our Lady and Saint John, to be used in the church, and remain for ever, to the intent that the said Felice, her husband, father and mother, may be better remembered and prayed for.

1510. The Sheffield Manor House or Lodge raised by George, fourth Earl of Shrewsbury. "Hitherto the Lords of Hallamshire had no mansion at Sheffield but the castle, or at most only a small lodge in their Park. The castle, though spacious, magnificent, and strong, was not, on several accounts, the most desirable of residences in time of perfect peace. The Earl therefore made great additions to the lodge in the centre of his park, about two miles from the castle and town, or raised there from its foundations a noble country residence, which he completed early in the reign of Henry VIII."

— The sepulchral chapel of the Shrewsbury family raised in the parish church. "Here the funeral obsequies of the Lords of Hallamshire were performed, and here their bodies, one by one, were returned to the earth out of which they were taken. Before the reformation might be seen a fine series of their monuments, arranged on each side the choir, immediately before the altar, and in the Lady chapel, commencing with the founder and ending with the third Earl of Shrewsbury, (Edward IV.) but not without some intermissions.—The nameless and mutilated effigies in an obscure corner of the church are all that remain of this once splendid series."—H.H. 1824.

1530. Vicarage of Sheffield. Clear income of the vicar of Sheffield, (parish priest,) £12. 15s. 2d., or the vicarage house and croft, and twenty-four times their value in yearly income.—Income of the three assistant ministers, seventeen pounds per year.

Nov. 8. Cardinal Wolsey, having been disgraced by Henry VIII., delivered to the custody of George, fourth Earl of Shrewsbury, and by him confined at the manor.

"————— My high blown pride
At length broke under me, and now has left me,

1533—53.

Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of the world, I hate ye!
I feel my heart new opened."—Shaks.

1533. Price of provisions,—beef  $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per lb., mutton  $\frac{3}{4}$ d. per lb., a fat lamb, 1s.
1534. Saint Peter's Church first called the Church of the Holy Trinity. "Now whilst some country people sate in consultation what new saint such church should assume, being divided in their opinions to whom the same should be dedicated, an old man gave his advice;—even dedicate it to the Holy Trinity, which will last and continue when all other saints may chance to be taken away."—Fuller's Church History.
1535. The profits of the vicarage of Sheffield consisted of a house and croft, value per annum ten shillings; tythe of wool and lambs £1. 16s.; oblations £6. 18s.; Easter book £4; minute and privy tythes 2s. 8d.; total, £13. 6s. 8d.—Eccles. Surv. 26 Hen. VIII.
- "————— If it pass against us
We lose the better half of our possessions;
For all the temporal lands which men devout
By testament have given to the church,
Would they strip from us."—Shaks.
1538. George, fourth Earl of Shrewsbury, died, and was July 26. interred in the chapel built by him in the church of Sheffield, after having been Lord of Sheffield and Hallamshire, including his minority, seventy years.
1544. Advowson and presentation to the church at Sheffield possessed by Robert and William Swift.—Lett. Pat. 36 Henry VIII.
1552. Prices of labour; a labourer in husbandry, £1. 6s. per year; chief hind, carter, or shepherd, 20s.; common husbandry servant, 16s. 8d.; female servant, 10s.; a child, 6s. 8d.
- . Advowson and presentation of the church of Sheffield conveyed by Royal grant to Francis Earl of Shrewsbury.—6 Edward VI.
1553. Inhabitants of Sheffield represent to the Queen (Mary) that the fourteen hamlets within the parish were never void of plagues and other evil diseases.
- . Robert Swyfte and William Taylor, of the parish of Sheffield, "for and in the names of all other baby-

1557. Foreign iron used in Sheffield; "Danske yron and Spanysche yron."—A. C. B. "It was wanted by the burgesses for a structure which was erected in the parish churches at Easter, called the sepulchre house. We may collect from these entries the relative value of Spanish iron to that which was imported from the Baltic. It was as 7 to 6; the 100 of Spanish costing by retail 14s., and of Danish 12s."
- . First account of the receipts of the church burgesses since the incorporation:—"The reckonings of Ro-

1570. Artisans from the Netherlands settle in Hallamshire. "The cruel Duke of Alva had driven numbers of artisans from their homes in the Netherlands; they fled for safety to England, where they were cordially received by the Queen, and by the advice of her Chamberlain, the Earl of Shrewsbury, settled in various parts of the kingdom, all of one occupation in the same place; thus enabling them to carry on their several crafts with advantage. Of these recusants, all or the greater part of them who were artificers in iron, were sent to the Earl's own estate in Yorkshire, and hence we may date the first improvement in Sheffield cutlery. Now began to be made shears, sickles, knives of every kind, and scissors; the manufacturers of each article confining themselves to some particular village, which arrangement in a great measure continues to this day."—Northern Star.

1592. This year the north front gallery of the parish church was erected, as appears by the date deeply inscribed upon a supporter at the last end.—Ed. Goodwin, 1797.

1598. State of manufactures.—“After the death of the good Earl, (George, sixth Earl of Shrewsbury,) this heterogeneous mass of manufacturers (the artisans from the Netherlands and the native cutlers,) no longer under any controul, began to follow their own fancies in the management of their fabrics; and in despite of the wise regulations before laid down, which peculiarly tended to give a celebrity to their wares, for the goodness of their workmanship, and their consequent durability, their only idea seems to have been, to make as many articles as possible, and those of a spurious kind. They laid aside all restrictions in respect to the persons who should be employed, or who ought to be instructed in the respective businesses, and before the end of the succeeding reign, (James I.—1624,) brought the trade into such a state of disrepute, as to render it necessary, in order for its restoration, for the legislature to throw the spirit of the former laws of the Earl of Shrewsbury into the shape of an Act of Parliament.”—North. Star, Hist. of Iron Trade.

1600. “The manufacturers began an ordinary sort of tobacco boxes, and a silly musical instrument called a jew's trump.”—Harrison.

— The Sembali-green (Wicker). “I cannot here omit a royalty that this manor (Sheffield) hath above other manors; that is upon every Sembali Tuesday (Tuesday after Easter day) is assembled upon the Sembali-green, where the court is kept and near unto the castle, at the least 139 horsemen with horses and harness provided by the freeholders, copyholders, and other tenants, and to appear before the Lord 1620. Sheffield lodge or manour "stood on a hill in the midst of the parks, fairly built with stone and timber, with an inward court and an outward court, two gardens, and three yardes, containing 4 acres, 1 rood, 15 perche."—Dugdale. "— the chieftain of the age of the eighth Henry, living here in the bosom of his numerous family, and unwillingly issuing forth to disperse the cloud of rebellion—the fallen Wolsey treading the gallery with heavy steps, or engaged in conference with his courteous host in one of its windowed recesses, and hearing the name of Kingston with alarm,—and at the window which bears her name, the victim of the lawless power of Elizabeth, looking for the friend who was to bring the means of descent from a height so fearful, that she might regain the liberty she loved."—H. H.

1620. The late Earles of Shrewsbury "were wont on every yeare, on a certyne day, to have many bucks lodged in a meadow neare the towne side, about a mile in compasse, to which place repaired almost all the apron men of the parish, and had liberty to kill and carry away as many as they could with their hands."—Dodsworth.
- "Sheffield owed to the house of Lovetot the establishment of an hospital for its sick infirmis." "This hospital stood on an eminence on the east side of the town still called the Spital-hill, and continued to afford relief to the poor of Sheffield, till the eight Henry swept away so many institutions of our forefathers, the beneficial with the useless, in undistinguishing fury. Dodsworth, who visited Sheffield in August 1620, speaks of it only as a thing which had been."—H. H. "There hath been a spital there on that side of the hill."—Dodsworth.
- "The hawle at the poandes," an appendage (the laundry) to the castle, existed.

Milward, George Dam, Thomas Pearson, Thomas Parkyn, and Thomas Haworth.

1626. Thomas Wild, cutler, living in the Crooked Bill yard, High-street, made Liéut. Felton the knife with which he stabbed the Duke of Buckingham.—(Charles I.) "The knife was found in the Duke's body, and on examining it, a corporation mark was observed upon it, when enquiry was made to the London cutlers whether the knife had been made in London, who all agreed it had been made at 1626--38.

Sheffield, and the corporate mark would soon find out the real maker. An express was sent to Sheffield, and the poor cutler Wild was sent to London, and taken to the Earl of Arundel's house. Wild acknowledged the mark was his, and that it was one out of two knives which he had made for Col. Felton, who was recruiting at Sheffield, for which he charged him tenpence. The Earl was well satisfied of the truth and simplicity of Thomas Wild's testimony, and ordered him to be paid the expenses of his journey home."—Shef. Merc.

1626. Burntland well—money paid by the town trustees for support thereof.
- . "Certain landes given by Rob. Rollinson to the church burgesses, viz. a house in the Market-stead, a cottage in Grimsthorpe, with three other houses in Sheffield, for which the burgesses are to pay to Rob. Rollinson and his heirs the sum of 50s. a year for Figtree Hall."—A. C. B.

—. Manufacture of files, razors, and spring-knives, first commenced.

—. Sheffield and its neighbourhood represented by the royalists as being actively disaffected; the Presbyterian party supported by Dr. John Bright, the vicar; the families of the Jessops, at Broomhall, the Brights of Carbrook, and the Spencers of Attercliffe, the most considerable in the parish, declared Parliamentarians.

1642. Lords Mowbray and Maltravers send from the castle of Sheffield to Doncaster, four wheel-pieces and their furniture for the king's (Charles I.) use.

1642. The Presbyterian and Parliamentarian party seize the castle of Sheffield. "Supported by Sir John Gell, who was in force in Derbyshire, they succeeded in gaining military possession of the castle and town, about which they cast up entrenchments."

"Where roll'd the confluent rivers at their base,
Frowning and dark the chieftain's towers arose,
Th' embattled strength of Sheffield's earlier days,
Pride of his friends and terror of his foes:
Through many a summer's sun and winter's snows
There waved his banner.—Long these towers withstood
All that time, war, or tempest could oppose:
Till red rebellion rear'd his standard there,
Then desolation follow'd through each future year."

W. H. Sterndale.

1643. Earl of Newcastle took military possession of the town and castle of Sheffield, and appointed Sir Wm. Saville, grandson of the sixth Earl of Shrewsbury, governor in the name of the King.

—. Cast iron cannon and other instruments and engines of war, made at the iron works near Sheffield, for the Royal party.

"Descending hence, where now the road descends,
'Till the Park's precincts at the river ends,
Where spreads the vale and its green skirts outrun
Along the winding margin of the Dun;—

1644—48.

There black and huge, the haunt of Cyclop bands
 And crown'd with spiry flame, a furnace stands;
 Incessant day and night its crater roars,
 Like the volcano on Sicilian shores;
 Its fiery womb the molten mass combines,
 Thence lava like the boiling torrent shines;
 Down the trench'd sand the liquid metal holds,
 Shoots showers of stars and fills the hollow moulds."

Holland's Sheffield Park.

1644. The castle of Sheffield summoned by the Earle of July 27. Manchester to surrender to the Parliamentary party.

Aug. 4. Major-General Crawford attacked the castle of Sheffield, "wherein were a troop of horse and two hundred foot, strongly fortified with a broad and deep trench of eighteen feet deep, and water in it, a strong brest work pallizadoed, a wall round of two yards thick, eight pieces of iron ordnance and two mortar pieces."

Aug. 10. Castle of Sheffield surrendered to the Earl of Manchester and forces of the Parliament, by Major Thomas Beaumont, deputy governor.

— The army of the Parliament gut the church, and destroy every pane of glass in the beautiful painted window; very few were left in the Shrewsbury chapel, the monuments of which were, however, left uninjured.—Anon.

1645. Captain Edward Gell, governor of Sheffield castle.

— Sheffield castle, and the estates surrounding it, seized by Commissioners of the Parliament, and a lease of the manor of Sheffield granted to Philips and Holland.

1646. Resolution passed the House of Commons that the April 30. castle of Sheffield should be made untenable.

1648—54.

1648. The grammar school, near Townhead-cross, built on the foundation of the original school-house, then "not habitable."

"Where sooty tops of clacking tilts arise,
Which heave their smoky volumes to the skies;
Where the red furnace boils with hollow roar
That melts to fiery wave the massy ore;
Where cheerful labour whistles on the wheel,
Which soothes to keenest edge the stubborn steel."

Rev. Dr. Inchbald.

1649. Earl of Arundel issued a warrant "for the repairinge
Jan. 5. the roomes at Sheffield castle, then undemolished."

"Its ruined walls were never built up again;—from this period, the once proud castle of Sheffield was but a heap of shapeless ruins, every year doing something to complete the destruction which the axe of violence had begun. A few vaults are all which now (1828) remain to bear witness that such an edifice once stood on what is still however called the Castle-hill."

1649. Salaries of the assistant ministers. "There be three assistant ministers belonging to the said church, viz., Mr. Bridges, Mr. Metcalfe, and Mr. Bagshawe, all able and powerfull preachers, who have for their salarye fortye markss a-piece."—Parl. Ret.

1673. The hospital first occupied; inscription over the entrance: "The hospital of the right honourable Gibert earl of Shrewsbury, erected and settled by the right honourable Henry earl of Norwich, earl marshall of England, great-grand-child of the afore-said earl, in pursuance of his last will and testament. Anno Domini, 1673."

— The neighbourhood of Sheffield celebrated for its growth of oaks. "I am informed by a person of credit, that an oak in Sheffield park, called the Lady's oak, when felled, contained forty-two tons of timber, which had arms which held at least four feet square, for ten yards in length; the body six feet of clear timber; thus, in the same park, one might have chosen above a thousand trees worth above six thousand pounds; another thousand worth four thousand pounds, et sic de cæteris. To this Mr. Hatton replies, that it might possibly be meant of the lord's oak already mentioned to have grown at Rivelin, for now Rivelin itself is totally destitute of that issue she once might have gloried in of oaks; and as to the computation of 1000 trees worth £6000, it is believed there were a 1000 much above that value, since, in what is now enclosed, it is evident, touching a hundred worth a thousand pounds."—Evelyn's Sylva.

1676. The church-yard paved. "Pd. to Mr. Cook, for paving the church-yard, £2. 1s. 6d.—A. C. B.

1678. A new clock set up in the church, and the seats repaired. "Pd. to John Atkinson for the new clock, and for other work about ye clockhouse, £13. 11s. 4d. Pd. - . Francis Barlow willed that his houses in Sheffield
Mar. 2. should be charged with the payment of six pounds a-year to the overseers of the poor, to be given to the most needy decayed tradesmen of the town.—
 "This annuity is received from the proprietor of certain lands at Middlethorpe, (charged in lieu of the houses,) and is usually given to twelve poor tradesmen in sums of 10s. each, at or about Christmas."—Parl. Ret. 1829.
1692. Pond mill made by the town trustees.
1693. "I have conversed with those who have heard it from persons who had witnessed it, that the Duke of Norfolk and his sister-in-law, the Lady Howard, used to attend public service at the church of Sheffield, and that the appearance of their carriages on the Park hill top, was the signal to the ringers to ring their last peal."—Joseph Hunter, 1819.
- . Ancient roads:—"Before the unhappy civil wars broke out, (1644,) the gate of the park next Gleadless-moor, was, by order of the owner, (Henry, Duke of Norfolk,) four times every year stopped up, to prevent the same being claimed as a highway, and several times I have seen the same chained up, and the carriers' pack-horses, carts, and carriages stopped from going that way, without asking leave or paying something. The ancient highway leading from Sheffield to the North-east part of Handsworth parish was through Attercliffe and Darnall; and to the South-east side of the said parish through Little Sheffield, Heeley, and Newfield-green, to London."—Depos. of Nicholas Shiercliffe, cutler of Sheffield, aged 86, given in the Duke's suit about the right of road to the market.
1695. Three new bells put up in the church.—"Pd. to Mr. Smith, of York, for casting 5th, 4th, and 3d bells, and money paid on the acct. of bringing the bells from Rotherham, £6. 10s. 11d."—A. C. B.
1696. About this time was built in Pepper-alley, the first brick house in Sheffield; which was viewed by the inhabitants with wonder and ridicule, they supposing it to be built of such perishable materials, that it must soon yield to destruction. It is now (1797) Mr. Broomhead's warehouse. "Communicated by Mr. Hall, who died in 1786, aged 95.—Edward Goodwin, 1797."

1697. "Assessment made ye. 5 day of May, Anno Dom. 1697, for the use of the churchwardens and overseers of ye. poor of ye. toune of Sheffield, made by us, who doo alsoo agree and order the same to be gathered fowerfold. Totol of ye. three first books £177. 17s. 10d."—Orig. doc. It appears from this document that the total number of persons assessed for the relief of the poor was 760.—Edit.

— Supply of water:—Mr. Peter Whalley, an engineer of Nottingham, obtained from the Duke of Norfolk the lease of a rood of land near the Lady's Bridge; a lease of that part of the river Don which lies between Lady's Bridge and Cawton's weir, and a lease of a piece of waste ground near Barker-pool, with license to break up the streets of the town for laying down his pipes, for the purpose of better supplying the town with water.

1699. Mr. Richard Broughton by his will charged his lands called Gist Carr, with the payment of £5 per annum for the use of poor cutlers and scissor-smiths.

— Well at church gates, great well in Trippet-lane, and many other wells, made by the town trustees.

— Fall of the forest trees in the Park, and destruction of the Lord's oak, whose bole was twelve yards in girth.

"Planted by him who waved the vengeful sword
Of conquering William's desolating ire,
A wrath the Saxon long in vain deplored,
Amidst thy city's ruins, Hallamshire.
And so it grew unscathed by wind or fire,
The red deer's shelter and the falcon's nest;
Long waved it there ev'n when the hoary sire
Told how the hand for ages had been blent
With kindred dust that reared that sylvan monument."

W. H. Sterndale.

— The parish of Sheffield first divided into six townships. "The Park, the greater part of the town of Sheffield, and a small piece of ground lying north of the town form the township of Sheffield. The part of the parish which lies on the left bank of the Don, is the township of Brightside Byerlow. The triangular piece of land of which the river Dun and the line of the Park wall are two sides, and the eastern boundary of the parish the third, forms the township of Attercliffe-cum-Darnall. The rest of the parish was anciently but one township, known by the name of Hallam-cum-Ecclesall; but was divided into the three townships of Ecclesall, Hallam Upper, and Hallam Nether."—H.H.

1700. "At the entrance of the chancel door of the church, (St. Peter's,) was interred William Walker, of Darnall, supposed to have been the executioner of Charles the First, (Ed. Goodwin, 1797,) but with better reason to have been the translator of the Vindiciæ contra Tyrannos."—Hunter.
- The town hall erected at the South-east corner of the church-yard, towards which the Duke of Norfolk gave £100, on condition he should there hold his manorial courts.
- Dissenters:—Second and larger meeting house (the upper chapel) erected in Sheffield for religious worship, on a piece of ground between Pepper-alley and Alsop-fields; first stone laid by Mr. Field Sylvester.
- "At this period the inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood were less distinguished by the elegance and refinement of social life, than by feelings of independence and rigid honesty, by hospitality and a rude and boisterous conviviality. There were no assemblies, no theatre, and the principal amusements of the place were the sports at the castle bowling-green, and social meetings at the taverns."—Hunter.
1701. Decease of William Henry Howard, seventh Duke of Norfolk.

“Blush venal genius of those outraged groves,
And thy apostate head with thy soil'd wing,
Veil! who hast thus thy beauteous charge resigned
To habitants illsuited; hast allow'd
Their rattling forges and their hammers din,
And hoarse rude throats, to fright the gentle train,
Dryads and fair hair'd naiades;—the song
Once loud as sweet of the wild woodland choir
To silence;—disenchant the spell,
And to a gloomy Erebus transform
The destined rival of Tempean vales.”—Miss Setward.

 A lofty turret nodding to the storm;
 Wrapt in a vest of ivy proud it stood,
 As some gay wreck that had survived the flood;
 There angry winds in furious skirmish met,
 Swept its green cloak and mouldering parapet,—
 Seem'd as with fingers rude to mock at crime
 And pluck'd the wizard beard of hoary time:
 The bat here claim'd hereditary right;
 The owl its tenant scream'd, unscared at night:
 At last like age weigh'd down with years it fell,
 Nor left a vestige of its fate to tell."

General meeting of the seatholders of the parish church; resolved "that the interior of the church should be repaired pursuant to the order of the archdeacon; that the church burgesses do (as they have agreed) pay for the pulling down the pillars and the arches in the body of the church, raising them higher, altering the roof over the north and south aisles, &c., and that the seatholders do defray the expense of new paving the church." Rev. George Smith chairman; George Knowles and John Morver, churchwardens.

— The Romans had a temple on or near to the site of the old church, and what confirms it is a that when the repairs and addition were making, it was found that the east end stood upon a vast bed of bones, and it excited the curiosity of the undertakers to examine further, when they found that that part almost entirely stood upon bones, and they were surprised how the church stood on such a foundation. It has always been remarked that where the Roman Campa is found, that there also many bones are discovered. It is without dispute that Campo-lane has the same reference to the Campa as Church-street has to the church. The old Brocco Bank was a Roman appellation; and Ponoters-lane is supposed to be Roman.—

- 18. Decease of the Rev. James Wilkinson, A.M. (aged 75,) vicar of Sheffield, and justice of the peace for Yorkshire, "whose life had been pre-eminently distinguished by unaffected piety, inflexible integrity, and unwearied zeal in the service of the public during a period of half a century." "His whole life was devoted to the public good. Such was the commanding influence of his superior character—his unfeigned, though unostentatious piety—his quick penetration and solid judgment—his mild, modest, and conciliating, yet dignified manners—his inflexible integrity—his respectable family and fortune—and lastly, his venerable age and estimable services,—that few persons have had the enviable opportunity of being so eminently useful to society. However it might be suspected that the language of panegyric is improperly used by the pen of friendship to describe the deceased 'excellent of the earth,' they who knew the subject of that praise, know well that it is not overcharged, but faithfully characteristic of this, one of the most worthy and amiable of human beings."—

Iris.

When night comes on are seen to grieve,
 And steep their heads in gloom and dews ;
 But with returning beams unfold,
 In grateful sign, their leaves of gold,—

“ So we our gratitude would prove
 To thee whose goodness crowns our days,
 In whom we live, in whom we move,
 By keeping wisdom's peaceful ways,
 And thus a sweeter fragrance yield,
 Than aught that decks the smiling field.”

The great body of the people assembled retired to the numerous houses, where preparations had been made to celebrate the day, and about fifteen hundred with Mr. T. A. Ward at their head, proceeded to partake of a public dinner at Hyde Park.

No paltry fray, no bloody day,
That crowns with praise the baby great;
The DEED of Brougham, Russell, Grey,
The DEED that's done, we celebrate!

Mind's great charter! Europe saved!

Man for ever unenslaved!

Oh! could the wise, the brave, the just,
Who suffered—died—to break our chains:
Could Muir, could Palmer, from the dust,
Could murdered Gerald hear our strains,
Then would martyrs, throned in bliss,
See all ages bless'd in this.

His memory will be cherished with grateful recollection by those who were most intimately acquainted with him, and by his numerous tenants and dependants, to whom he was known as a gentleman of strict integrity, of universal kindness, and of liberal indulgence. His retired habits, and unconquerable modesty, kept him from taking the public station, for which his rank, and especially his talents and attainments, qualified him. He was an accurate and profound thinker, well read in history and general literature, and possessed large and comprehensive powers of mind. Though he had arrived at an advanced period of life, yet, in the year 1832, Mr. Shore served the office of High Sheriff for the county of Derby. As a politician, he was a decided Whig, in the true sense of that term, apprehending no evil in great political changes, when in accordance with the spirit of the British Constitution, and when in themselves necessary and beneficial.

mined by the Magistrates on a charge of high treason. The table of the Court was covered with spears, daggers, fire-arms, bomb-shells, hand grenades, ball cartridges, and fire-balls.

- Jan. 14. Examination of the prisoners resumed, when Samuel Thompson, son of the prisoner of the same name, gave evidence of the designs and plans of the Chartist, of whom he had been one of the class leaders. The charge of high treason was then limited to Holberry and Thomas Booker, who were committed on the charge, and, at the close of the examination, sent under a military escort to York Castle. Mary Holberry and Thompson, sen., were discharged. Wm. Wells, a young man respectably connected, was admitted to give evidence; but as he appeared not to speak the truth, he was remanded.
- 16. John Frost, Zephaniah Williams, and Wm. Jones, convicted of high treason, at Monmouth, were sentenced to death; but a point of law was reserved for the consideration of the Judges.
- 17. Resumed examination of the Chartists, when Wells appeared as a prisoner, and Samuel Foxall was admitted as a witness. The prisoners were again remanded to Monday.
- 18. In consequence of the excitement produced by the Chartist alarms, the number of the Independent printed this day was 4,600.
- Decease of Mr. Henry Osborne, Attercliffe, aged 37.
- 20. Resumed examination of the Chartists; Earl Fitzwilliam presiding. John Clayton, Wm. Booker, John Marshall, Thos. Penthorpe, Joseph Bennison, Wm. Wells, and James Duffy, were committed to York, charged with conspiracy.
- Registered Births, in the Sheffield Union, from July to December, 1839, 1709; deaths ditto, 1416.
- 24. Ann Law committed to York, charged with an attempt to murder her daughter, a little girl, by throwing her into the water, near Rivelin Mill.
- 25. The Anti-Corn Law petition sent to Parliament, with 11,500 signatures.
- 29. A majority of the Judges decided that the legal objection in the case of Frost, Williams, and Jones, would have been good if made in time, but was not in time when made. The sentence was commuted to that of transportation.
- Feb. 1. Sheffield Union: Paupers in the house, 408; week's payment to casual poor, £100.
- 3. Ecclesall Union; Paupers in the houses, 238; week's outpayments, £69.

He became an inhabitant of Sheffield in 1821, and conducted an iron and steel business there successfully for twenty years. In the year 1841, he retired from business, and took up his abode at Houghton Common, near Barnsley. There he spent the latter days of a useful and a honourable life, and there he died. His last illness was of a painful and lingering description; but was borne with that remarkable firmness of character which distinguished his conduct in his best days. No man possessed greater energy of mind, or more strong self-will. After a resolute though vain contest with his disease, he expired calmly, and without a struggle, in the presence of his beloved family. Mr. Elliott was for many years an occasional correspondent of the Independent; and we record his death with feelings of great regret. We were often favoured by his communications—in both prose and verse—whilst he resided in Sheffield; and our poet's corner has even lately been graced by his original productions. Our personal acquaintance with him has been to us a source of much pleasure.—Independent.
